

CHAKRA PSYCHOLOGY

Continued Professional Development (CPD) course for healers, bodywork therapists, counsellors and psychotherapists

Tutor: Delcia McNeil, CQSW, BA(hons), ITEC, UKCP, humanistic psychotherapist and subtle energy healer

Delcia is a member of the Association for Therapeutic Healers and the Doctor-Healer Network. She is a published author and co-ran the Rowan School for Healing & Personal Growth from 1993-2003. She has been passionate about chakras ever since she was introduced to them in 1981.

This course is designed for you to:

- build on previous awareness of the chakra system and so increase its value both personally and professionally
- support healers and therapists to draw on information and guidance given to them by their own chakras and so support them in their continued self healing process
- encourage greater use of chakra psychological theory within general therapeutic sessions; this may include energetic, psychic, touch, movement, creative expressive, or talking therapies
- compare different contemporary approaches to the use of the chakra system as a model for human growth and development

Here is what a recent participant has to say:

"This Chakra Psychology course has come at the perfect time for me, as I'm expanding my professional practice as well as deepening my self-development work. It is giving me a fascinating insight into the power of the chakra system as well as psychology as a whole. A truly holistic course, it's like pieces of a jigsaw puzzle are coming together in my understanding of the development of the psyche/body-mind. The course is presenting opportunities for me to examine and heal myself at the same time as providing tools for my kitbag as a practitioner. It is enriching every field that my work covers, from healing, bodywork, NLP, Hypnotherapy and teaching meditation. I highly recommend the course for any therapist. It's a gem." Linda Hall, North London
